WIRELESS APPARATUS IS GIFT TO UNIVERSITY

Charlottesville, Va., January 29.—The Leander McCormick Observatory at the University of Virginia has recently received a gift of a complete receiving apparatus for wireless telegraphy. The apparatus comes to Virginia as a personal gift to Professor Mitchell, director of the observatory, from his friend, John Neilson, of New York City. While at Harvard during the Christmas holidays Dr. Mitchell entered into a plan of co-operation with the director of the Harvard Observatory, which spends no less than $50,000 a year in astronomical work. This co-operation will be especially advantageous to Virginia.

TERMS: Cash. Further particulars and details on application at the office, 1018 East Main Street.
